

Outlook of Electric Industry Is Bright During National Electrical Week

The outlook of the electric industry is bright during National Electrical Week, which is being celebrated in many parts of the country. The industry is expected to show a steady increase in production and sales during the coming year.

The National Electrical Manufacturers Association (NEMA) has announced that the industry's production of electrical equipment is expected to increase by 10% in 1958. This is a significant increase from the 5% increase in 1957.

The industry's sales are also expected to show a steady increase. NEMA estimates that the industry's sales will reach $10 billion in 1958, up from $9 billion in 1957.

The industry's growth is being driven by a number of factors, including the increasing demand for electrical equipment in the home, the growing use of electricity in industry, and the expansion of the power grid.

The industry is also benefiting from the government's investment in the development of new electrical technologies. The government has funded a number of research and development projects, which are expected to lead to the development of new and improved electrical products.

Overall, the outlook for the electric industry is very bright. The industry is expected to continue to grow at a steady pace, and to play a major role in the nation's economy.

And all taxes provided by the company - federal, state and local - reached almost $5,000,000 in excess of 26 cents out of every dollar collected from our customers.
